Successful organizations know that negative conflict within an organization creates morale problems, slowdowns in work and employee dissatisfaction. Often conflict in the workplace arises as a result of differences in personalities and approaches to solving problems and accomplishing goals.

In this professional development program, employees will gain a deeper understanding of themselves through the use of the Myers-Briggs Type Indicator (MBTI). This tool will help them become more aware of their own personality traits and preferences and enable them to more easily view the traits and preferences of others they work with and for. Mutual understanding, along with the development of empathy for one another, is absolutely key to harmony in today's highly pressured and diverse workplace.

Everyone is needed — analytical thinkers, creative thinkers, people who hone in on the details and people who stand back to see the big picture. When different types of people truly comprehend that their differences need not lead to conflict... the workplace yields more flexibility and better synergy.
